A Chicago Police marine unit searches for missing Lauren Li in the Chicago River.

E. JASON WAMBSGANS/TRIBUNE

A SAD END

AFTER TWO DAYS OF SEARCHING, DIVERS RECOVER BODY

Chicago Tribune

Police divers found the body of a missing college student Wednesday afternoon, 2½ days after the Minnesota woman vanished beneath the surface of the frigid Chicago River.

Chicago police said Lauren Li, 21, slipped into the icy river while trying to help her friend, Ken Hoang, 26, who had fallen into the water while trying to retrieve a dropped cellphone Monday shortly after midnight. He, too, died.

The end to the search for Li came hours after another friend, the lone survivor, was released from a hospital. Quoc-Viet Phan Hoang, 23, also fell into the river near River Esplanade Park, not far from Lake Shore Drive.

Li, an honors student at the University of Minnesota who aspired to become a doctor,

Li's parents, both Chinese immigrants, hurried to Chicago from their Minnesota home to await word on the search effort.

"That's a relief to me, if nothing else," Li's older brother, Frank, said Wednesday by telephone after learning a body had been discovered about 1 p.m. near where Li had gone missing.

Police tied a ribbon of yellow crime scene tape to a railing near where they found the body.

According to a police report obtained by the Tribune, Hoang was taking photos from the riverwalk when he dropped his cellphone onto the ice below. He climbed over a fence onto the ice but fell into the water. Li then dropped down onto the ice to rescue him but also slipped into the river. She yelled out for help, and Phan Hoang then stepped onto the ice and fell into the water, police said.

The Cook County medical examiner's office ruled Tuesday that Hoang drowned and that alcohol contributed to his death.

Li's autopsy is scheduled for Thursday.

Divers had made repeated efforts to find Li's body since Monday, even using a small sonar device to probe the ice-covered river. Search efforts were hampered by freezing conditions, the ice and zero visibility underwater.

University of Minnesota officials said Li was a senior in the school's College of Biological Science and active in campus Asian-American student organizations. Hoang, who was born in Vietnam, was a liberal arts student who attended the university until 2010, a campus official said.

"The University of Minnesota extends our sympathy to the families of Ken Hoang and Lauren Li, both of whom died in a tragic accident in the Chicago River. We are relieved both families now have closure," Danita Brown Young, the university's dean of students, said in a statement.

THE SURVIVOR

Quoc-Viet Phan Hoang was released Wednesday from Presence St. Joseph Hospital, spokeswoman Linda O'Dwyer said. "I lost two good friends," Phan Hoang said in a statement issued Tuesday.

"It's not easy seeing your friend drift away and having one die in your arms. I have never felt so helpless in my life."

Welcome to Hell Yeah/Hell No, a column in which I answer questions about how to not be a jerk in Chicago. I am not an etiquette expert, nor am I that great of a human being, to be honest. RedEye is not responsible for actions resulting from this column. Follow this advice at your own risk. (OK, seriously, don't follow this advice.)

Is it appropriate to light a bag on fire if someone puts theirs on an open seat on the CTA?

Hell no. I think the message you're trying to get across—"Hey, butthead, you're a butthead"—would be more successful with something a little more subtle. Try inconspicuously (or hell, conspicuously) peeing on it. Or maaaaybe you could light it on fire and THEN pee on it.

Someone is plastering his used contact lenses on the wall in the men's room. Is it rude to put up a sign?

Hell no, but only if the "sign" is constructed from the used lenses themselves. And blood. I would recommend something to the effect of "I'm watching you."

Explain the proper use of the escalator, please. Left: Walking. Right: Standing. Couples should stand in a row, not side by side.

BUT THE ESCALATOR IS FOR PEOPLE WHO DON'T WANT TO MOVE.

What's the best way to get around people who walk four across, "Sex and the City" style?

Idiot! They obviously are just opening up the floor for a game of Red Rover. Join in! Ashley's going down.

What should I do when people ask for advice, only to not take my advice, and do the exact opposite of what I told them?

Frustrating, isn't it? Statistically speaking, the advice you dole out to friends, loved ones and strangers on the Red Line is great stuff 99.8 percent of the time. Why can't people just understand and accept that you are always right? Ack! Here's some advice about giving advice: You can't give a damn whether or not the person follows it. That's not the point. When it blows up in their face later, give them a shoulder to cry on while you stroke their back, tell them it will be OK and take a selfie of yourself maniacally grinning.

Is throwing an elbow to the face allowed if people won't let you out at your stop during rush hour in the morning?

Hell yeah.

E-cigarettes will join regular smokes and other tobacco products as forbidden in most indoor public places in Chicago after aldermen on Wednesday approved a measure backed by Mayor Emanuel to restrict where electronic cigarettes can be used and how they can be sold.

The ordinance, which passed 45-4 after opponents took one last chance to voice their displeasure, will prohibit people from using e-cigarettes in restaurants, bars and most other indoor public places in the city. The measure also will require retailers to sell e-cigarettes from behind the counter so it's harder for minors to get their hands on them.

Emanuel has made tobacco regulations a recent focus, working to frame the discussion over cigarette sales as a question of how willing elected officials are to protect children from getting lured into addiction at a young age.

At last month's City Council meeting, aldermen voted to restrict sales of menthol cigarettes near Chicago schools. Emanuel delivered a short speech from the dais, positioning himself as a bulwark against the evils of Big Tobacco. Emanuel also increased the city's cigarette tax as part of his 2014 budget.

On Wednesday, the mayor used approval of the e-cigarette regulations as another chance to lay out his anti-tobacco bona fides, saying Chicago can't wait for the Food and Drug Administration to take a position on the safety of the products.

"Having worked with the FDA, having encouraged them to take steps to protect individuals and children, they are usually an agency that leads from behind," Emanuel said. "And when it comes to the city of Chicago, when it comes to the people of the city of Chicago, when it comes to the children of the city of Chicago, I do not believe we should wait."

SMOKE AND SENATORS

It's not just Chicago where electronic cigarettes are under the microscope. A group of U.S. senators were none too happy with the Golden Globes for showing celebrities puffing away during Sunday's awards show. "We ask the Hollywood Foreign Press Association and NBC Universal to take actions to ensure that future broadcasts of the Golden Globes do not intentionally feature images of e-cigarettes," wrote the group of four Democratic lawmakers, which included Illinois Sen. Dick Durbin. REDEYE to oppose the indoor ban on e-cigarettes. Reilly, who said he's using e-cigarettes to help him quit smoking, likened the devices to needle exchanges for heroin addicts.

He said the gadgets help reduce the harm smokers suffer by offering a product safer than conventional smokes. "We're talking about treating two different products like they're one, like they're combustible cigarettes," Reilly said.

And Ald. Rey Colon (35th) said he resents the way people who oppose greater restrictions on e-smoking have been accused of not having children's best interests at heart. "I hate to keep using, I keep thinking of that movie 'My Cousin Vinny'—'the youths, the youths.' We keep using the children as an excuse to pass any ordinance we want to pass, because who can deny the children?" Colon said.

After the vote, electronic cigarette manufacturer Njoy released a statement expressing disappointment. "This vote lacks any scientific basis and reflects a clear misunderstanding on the part of the City Council of the serious unintended consequences to public health that their actions will cause," the statement reads in part. "Make no mistake: this will only benefit Big Tobacco and is a step backward in the fight against the tobacco epidemic."

E-cigarette use will be prohibited in most indoor public places starting April 29, while the new rules on the sale of e-cigarettes will take effect in six months. Stores that violate the sales rules and are caught could be hit with fines of up to $2,000.

SPEAKING OF THE CITY COUNCIL ...

» Aids. Ed Burke (14th) and James Balcer (11th) introduced a resolution Wednesday opposing a proposal backed by U.S. Sens. Dick Durbin and Mark Kirk to name the Washington, D.C., headquarters of the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives after Prohibition-era crime fighter Eliot Ness. While Ness has been lionized as leader of "The Untouchables" who were credited with playing a major role in bringing down gangster Al Capone, the aldermen argue Ness' life does not live up to his legend. "Eliot Ness had a checkered career after leaving the federal government," Burke said in a news release. "I simply do not think his image matches the actual reality of his legacy."

» Aldermen approved $13.8 million in lawsuit settlements. Nanny Jennifer Anton was pushing a stroller carrying a 20-month-old girl and shoved the child out of harm's way before drunken city worker Dwight Washington crashed his city pickup truck into a crowd on a Gold Coast sidewalk. Anton will receive $7.4 million for severe injuries she suffered in the May 2011 incident. Separately, Larry Gillard will get nearly $6.4 million for a wrongful conviction in a 1981 rape case.

Catholic archdiocese turns over 6,000 pages of documents to victims' attorneys

Chicago Tribune

The Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Chicago turned over nearly 6,000 pages of documents detailing clergy sex abuse to victims' attorneys Wednesday, the same day church officials publicly reiterated concern for those who suffered and regret for their own mistakes.

"I want to offer apologies to all victims affected by these sins and crimes," Auxiliary Bishop Francis Kane said during a news conference on the documents, echoing sentiments voiced by Cardinal Francis George in a letter read at parishes Sunday.

Attorneys representing the dozens who have substantiated claims of sex abuse against archdiocesan priests plan to release the documents—including complaints and personnel files on 30 priests—on Tuesday.

John O'Malley, an attorney for the archdiocese, said Wednesday at the news conference that 95 percent of the incidents detailed in the documents occurred before 1988 and that none occurred after 1996. Most of the victims came forward with their allegations after 2000. The files of former priest and convicted sex offender Daniel McCormack are not included in the records because a judge has sealed them for upcoming trials, O'Malley said.

He added that 14 of the 30 priests in the documents have died, all but two are no longer priests, none is in active ministry and all of the allegations have been reported to civil authorities.

The disclosure will provide the broadest and most detailed accounts of the pain endured by the victims, who spent nine years pushing the church to provide the public that same broad perspective. The documents account for 30 out of more than 65 priests with substantiated allegations against them. Victims' attorney Jeff Anderson, whose staff will cull, collate and post the documents online, represented the accusers in cases against the 30 priests.

New video of soldier surfaces

5 A new video has surfaced of Army Sgt. Bowe Bergdahl, raising hope that the soldier captured in Afghanistan in 2009 is still alive. U.S. officials confirmed Wednesday that the video exists and said they believe it is genuine.

The video came to light in the last few days, said one official who was not authorized to speak publicly on the matter.

In the footage, Bergdahl refers to events within the last month, a sign that it was recorded recently, the official said.

Compared with previous videos, Bergdahl appeared to be in declining health, the official added.

"Not life threatening," the official said.

"He's been captive for [nearly] five years; it's showing."

The Idaho native was 23 when he went missing in June 2009 while serving in the eastern Afghan province of Paktika, near the border with Pakistan. He is believed to be held by the Taliban-allied Haqqani network.

Attempts to secure Bergdahl's release have included talks about a possible prisoner exchange in which the United States would transfer five Taliban prisoners held at the military prison at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba. The militants in June reiterated their willingness to do an exchange.

"Sgt. Bowe Bergdahl has been gone far too long, and we continue to call for and work toward his safe and immediate release," a Pentagon spokeswoman, Navy Cmdr. Elissa Smith, said in a statement Wednesday.

"We cannot discuss all the details of our efforts, but there should be no doubt that on a daily basis—using our military, intelligence and diplomatic tools—we try to see Sgt. Bergdahl returned home safely. Our hearts are with the Bergdahl family."

Bergdahl's family said they were aware of the new video.

"Naturally, this is very important to us and our resolve to continue our efforts to bring Bowe home as soon as possible," the family said in a statement released by the Idaho National Guard.

Unknown pharaoh discovered in Egypt

6 CAIRO Archaeologists in Egypt believe they have discovered the remains of a previously unknown pharaoh who reigned more than 3,600 years ago.

The skeleton of King Seneb Kay was uncovered at South Abydos, about 300 miles south of Cairo, by a University of Pennsylvania expedition working with the government, the Egyptian antiquities ministry said.

Never before heard of in ancient Egyptian history, King Seneb Kay's name was found inscribed in hieroglyphics written inside a royal cartouche—an oval with a horizontal line at one end signaling a royal name, the ministry said in a statement.

Photographs released with the statement showed what appeared to be a heavily damaged sarcophagus in a burial chamber with no roof.

The statement dates King Seneb Kay's rule to 1650 BC during a time known as the second intermediate period, when central authority collapsed and small kingdoms sprung up between the end of the Middle Kingdom and the start of the New Kingdom.

20 years later, we still judge Nancy and Tonya

Dana Moran

► damoran@tribune.com
► @vedeyedana

The Price of Gold

8 p.m. Thursday, ESPN

the fact she was the first American woman to land a triple axel in competition has been mostly lost to history.

Twenty years later, Tonya seemingly has little to lose. After finishing eighth at the '94 Olympics, she was forced to do what she could to survive, becoming a gardener and a boxer. Nancy still looks exactly the freaking same, has three kids and has maintained a mostly private persona. It's the same storyline, all over again.

In spite of all this, I still couldn't make myself root for Tonya. Is it because the idea that "Tonya Harding Is Bad" is so beaten into my memory? Is it because she's even less sympathetic today, overweight and bitter? Is it because Nancy Kerrigan declined to appear in this doc, choosing instead to wait for an NBC version set to air during the Sochi Olympics?

Or is it because I still don't believe she didn't plan the attack?

DANA MORAN IS REDEYE'S FEATURES EDITOR.

When Nancy Kerrigan and Tonya Harding took the world stage at the 1994 Lillehammer Olympics, there was no question which team I was on. Please, did Team Tonya even exist? Tonya's ex-husband hired a guy to smash the crap out of Nancy's knee with a metal baton and left her screaming on the rink floor, wearing a hideous scrunchie. Tonya had terrible bangs and was a huge crybaby.

Nancy, on the other hand, was gorgeous and totally composed. I remember reading a biography I'd gotten from one of those book order forms and learning she used the deck railing as a balance beam as a child. I never thought I'd be that graceful (still true) and was outraged when she only managed to take home the silver medal. Who cares if some other chick got a higher score? NANCY WAS ATTACKED!

In a not-so shocking twist, my 9-year-old self didn't exactly have the facts straight. Tonya's ex-husband, Jeff Gillooly, allegedly planned the attack and got off on a plea bargain. Tonya herself pleaded guilty to conspiring to hinder prosecution of the attackers, but maintained she had no advance knowledge of the crime.

Watching ESPN's 30 for 30 doc, "The Price of Gold," it was tough not to pity Tonya. Here's what the news glossed over 20 years ago: Tonya's mom was emotionally and physically abusive, she lived in a crappy home and often skated on an empty stomach. Even in the months leading up to the 1994 Olympics, she was forced to sew her own costumes and trained at a rink in the middle of a shopping mall. She was derided for her lack of femininity and

BLINK AND YOU MISSED IT

Beyond all the interviews and TV movies centered on the "whack heard 'round the world," Tonya Harding and Nancy Kerrigan have had other brushes with the spotlight.

- In 1996, Harding starred in the action film "Breakaway" as the girlfriend of a criminal. We can't make this up.
- In 2007, Kerrigan had a cameo in "Blades of Glory" as a character billed as "attractive official."
- Harding finished 3-3-0 in her professional boxing career.
- Kerrigan was inducted into the U.S. Figure Skating Hall of Fame in 2004.

1	Why is it so hard finding a center to play with Patrick Kane?	He's a little bit country, the others are a little bit rock 'n' roll.	Is he not playing nice in the sandbox again? I spoke to him about this just last week!	Because it's impossible to find a man who isn't jealous of Kaner's great hockey hair.	Because he's so good and he likes being the center of attention. Get it? CENTER? OK, I quit.	It must be because they're not looking hard enough.
2	Tom Thibodeau says the Bulls are still committed to winning an NBA title. How crazy is he?	On a scale of 1 to 10, a scale is not necessary. It ain't happening.	So crazy right now his love has got me lookin' so crazy right now so crazy. Oh wait, no that's Jay Z.	Crazy enough to screw us out of a lottery pick.	Delusional. Maybe even time to consider getting him committed.	That's for team psychologists to determine.
3	How much would you pay for an old, muddy Nike prototype shoe?	How much will you accept? Cut that in half and we still do not have a deal.	I would actually ask them to pay me with a suitcase full of $100s.	Same amount the Bulls would pay for Luol Deng.	Nothing. I get my own shoes muddy just walking through Lincoln Park, and I can do that for free.	Depends. Would someone clean it off first?
4	Whom should NBC hire for its Olympics broadcast team?	Charles Barkley, Jennifer Lawrence and someone from "Salute Your Shorts."	Hawk Harrelson. When someone wipes out in downhill skiing he can say "he gone!"	Chris Christie. Why? Because why not?!	Pat Foley. Have you heard him call play-by-play for the Hawks?	Amy Poehler and Tina Fey! Or maybe their stunt doubles.
5	Playing tennis in 108-degree heat is like totally a stupid idea, bro. Tennis in 40-below weather is where it's at.	... playing tennis in 123 degrees warmer than our coldest day of the year.	... being the face of the NBA while sporting an embarrassing hairline.	... running around fully clothed in a sauna. Hot, sweaty, unbearable.	... ridiculous. Everyone knows that's swimming weather.

ROSE RIDES AGAIN... ON THE PLANE

For the first time since suffering a torn right meniscus Nov. 22, Derrick Rose joined his Bulls teammates on a road trip. The team played Orlando on Wednesday and at Washington on Friday. “It’s always good to have him around,” teammate Kirk Hinrich said. “Obviously, we would love to have him playing.” Which might be in the playoffs. If the Bulls get there.

Fresh brunches

Weekends got a whole lot toastier

By Samantha Nelson | FOR REDEYE

Iced-over sidewalks and plunging temps are enough to drive even the wildest party animal into hibernation. With promise of bloody marys and hangover-helping hashes, these recently debuted weekend brunches make leaving the comfy confines of your couch a little more tolerable. REDEYE@TRIBUNE.COM | @REDEYEEATDRINK

● Parson's
Chicken & Fish
2952 W. Armitage Ave.
773-384-3333

Launched: Mid-December

Dishes: The star of this Logan Square hangout's small brunch menu is the chicken and biscuits ($12), made with fried Amish chicken thighs, housemade biscuits, a sunny-side-up egg and orange-honey reduction. You can also warm up with a bowl of pozole ($10); flavors rotate, with past versions including green chili-and-chicken and red chili-and-pork.

Drinks: Sip a bloody mary mixed with housemade sangrita and tomato juice ($8) or opt for the refreshing Beerdriver ($4), a blend of Hamm's and orange juice.

Brunch time: 9 a.m.-3 p.m.
Saturday and Sunday.
No reservations.

Honey Butter
Fried Chicken
3361 N. Elston Ave.
773-478-4000

Launched: Mid-December

● Brioche french toast at Trellis

Dishes: Instead of chicken and waffles, this Avondale restaurant puts its signature poultry atop French toast with bourbon maple syrup and honey butter ($10). For less sweet and more meat, try the fried chicken breakfast sandwich ($10), which includes fried egg, garlic aioli, braised kale and bacon.

Drinks: Order a blood orange-pomegranate mimosa or the Threesome, housemade bloody mary mix blended with tequila and Tecate (both $8).

Brunch time: 11 a.m.-2 p.m.
Saturday and Sunday.
No reservations.

● Trellis
2426 N. Racine Ave.
773-644-6441

Launched: Early December

Dishes: Slightly spicy and served with sausage-laden gravy, the jalapeno and fontiago cheese biscuits ($9) at this Lincoln Park spot are so popular they've been known to sell out. The lobster and crab omelet ($10) topped with bearnaise sauce and tobiko makes a decadent alternative.

Drinks: Seafood lovers should try The Claw ($14), a bloody mary made with chipotle peppers and clam juice and garnished with a whole crab claw. Or get toasty with the Smoulder ($13), a bloody mary spiked with scotch.

Brunch time: 10 a.m.-3 p.m.
Saturday and Sunday.
Reservations accepted.

Azzurra EnoTavola
1467 N. Milwaukee Ave.
773-278-5959

Launched: Early November

Dishes: This new Wicker Park spot offers traditional brunch items with an Italian bent, such as a focaccia eggs Benedict ($11) with prosciutto and sun-dried tomato or the French toast with housemade walnut liqueur mixed into the batter ($9).

Drinks: Amaro, an Italian herbal liqueur, is meant to help with digestion after a meal, but here it's billed as a "hangover killer" ($6).

Brunch time: 10 a.m.-3 p.m.
Saturday and Sunday.
Reservations accepted.

Bellwether Meeting House & Eatery

302 E. Illinois St. 312-222-1800

Launched: Late December

Dishes: The Streeterville restaurant launched brunch just a few weeks after opening, offering hearty eats such as a giant cinnamon roll served in a hot skillet with pecans ($10) and a quiche with Swiss chard, shallots and goat cheese ($14).

Drinks: Bellwether sticks to brunch standards with $6 mimosas and $7 bloody marys garnished with celery, olives and lime. "We try not to make the bloody mary a meal," said

● Crispy chicken with green tea waffles (top) and Nori omelet at Jellyfish owner Nick Tsoukalas. "We just want to keep it simple."

Brunch time: 10 a.m.-4 p.m. Sunday. Reservations accepted.

The Grid

351 W. Hubbard St. 312-321-1351

Launched: Early November

Dishes: Executive chef Eric Romano based this River North tavern's brunch menu on what he'd like to eat if hung over. That means quirky dishes such as the Eggs in Purgatory ($13), two eggs poached in a spicy tomato sauce with goat sausage, goat cheese and charred bread, or French toast ($13) made with panettone (an Italian sweet bread) that's stuffed with cream cheese, rolled in Frosted Flakes, deep-fried and then topped with carbonated blackberries and rum maple syrup.

Drinks: You can load up your bloody mary ($12) with imported cheeses, cured meats, charred shishito peppers and more. "It's like a meal in itself," Romano said.

Brunch time: 11 a.m.-3 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. Reservations accepted.

Nouveau Tavern

358 W. Ontario St. 312-915-4100

Launched: Early November

Dishes: The River North restaurant's New Orleans-influenced menu features crawfish etouffee ($14) with Cajun rice and two fried eggs, along with bananas foster French toast ($15) topped with fresh bananas, whipped cream and brown sugar syrup.

Drinks: For $15, you can sip bottomless mimosas throughout your meal.

Brunch time: 10 a.m.-2 p.m. Sundays. Reservations accepted.

● Jellyfish

1009 N. Rush St. 312-660-3111

Launched: Mid-December

Dishes: The Gold Coast restaurant's crispy chicken and green tea waffles ($14) puts an Asian spin on the traditional comfort food dish. Green tea powder replaces some of the flour in the waffles and the chicken is marinated for 24 hours in a dry rub, double-fried and topped with coconut syrup spiced with cardamom, star anise and cloves. The nori omelet ($11), a layered dish of egg and seaweed that resembles a gratin, was inspired by a dish that executive chef Jason Im likes to make himself for breakfast.

Drinks: The signature bloody mary comes with an uni shooter ($20). For a fruitier option, try the Tokyo iced tea ($14), green tea-infused vodka topped with ginger-peach tea.

Brunch time: 11:30 a.m.-3 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. Reservations accepted.

Bow & Stern Oyster Bar

1371 W. Chicago Ave.
312-988-0644

Launching: February

Dishes: Since opening the doors to this West Town restaurant last month, chef Brian Greene has been developing a weekend brunch menu with offerings such as smoked salmon rilletes with creme fraiche, herbs, shallots, lemon zest and pickled vegetables. A frisee and arugula salad with confit chicken thighs, poached egg and bacon is also in the works; topped with an onion marmalade and lemon-truffle dressing and served on a bed of French fries, Greene said the whole dish will resemble a bird's nest.

Drinks: Greene's a big fan of bloody marys, so expect to find them mixed with smoked tomatoes and jalapenos and incorporated into oyster shooters.

Brunch time: To be announced

HB Home Bistro

3404 N. Halsted St.
773-661-0299

Launched: Sunday

Dishes: The menu is divided into sandwiches, such as roasted pork belly on a pretzel roll with pickled red cabbage, swiss cheese, fried egg and mustard ($13), and hashes, which includes choices such as wagyu corned beef with potatoes, pickled onion, fried egg and horseradish gravy. You'll also find sides such as housemade ginger-sage breakfast sausage ($5).

Drinks: The Lakeview restaurant is BYOB but, if you bring the booze, you can get a carafe of orange juice or bloody mary mix for $4.

Brunch time: 11 a.m.-2 p.m. Sundays. No reservations.

Lady Edith comes into her own on 'Downton'

Los Angeles Times

There's something to be said for being the other sister.

Lady Edith, the second of three daughters to the Earl of Grantham in the upstairs-downstairs international sensation "Downton Abbey," has wrested compassion from overlooked middle siblings far and wide with her woeful existence.

The Jan Brady of post-Edwardian Yorkshire, in the course of three seasons, has endured no shortage of "Marcia! Marcia! Marcia!" moments. There is the combative relationship with her older, seemingly prettier sister Mary (Michelle Dockery)—complete with cutting one-liners that would surely muster a smile out of the Dowager Countess.

"It's all kind of depressingly great," says Laura Carmichael, the proprietor of the perpetually afflicted character. "Is that awful of me to say? It's just that I think all the negative things that have happened, and her always feeling like she's on the sidelines, have made her a far more interesting woman to me."

On the contrary, people have found their spirit animal in Lady Edith. Her fortunes—or misfortunes, rather—have inspired all the trappings of a 21st century wonder: e-cards, memes, Tumblr sites and fake Twitter accounts. Huffington Post has crowned her a "badass," and Slate, in a piece that ran in February, wrote of the open-to-change, plainer sister: "She's basically the Carrie Bradshaw of the mid-war set."

The fourth season made its stateside debut Sunday on PBS, six months since the death of Downton heir Matthew Crawley, and a gloom still hovers over the estate as the roaring '20s beckon. Lady luck, meanwhile, seems to finally be with Lady Edith. She continues to write her own column; her newspaper editor, Michael Gregson, is in love with her and willing to go to great lengths to be with her; and her wardrobe has become significantly beaded and chic.

It's all enough to get Carmichael's ruby red-stained lips to crack a smirk.

"It's a really strong [season] for Edith," the 27-year-old British actress said. "It's a fascinating time for women. We really get to play those moral dilemmas and social changes through Edith."

That's assuming American viewers, like some of the "Downton Abbey" brethren, are adverse to an advancing world. This season has already aired overseas, and the Internet is chock full of spoilers from Britain about a controversial predicament for Edith.

Prior to her consignment to adversity as Lady Edith, the then-aspiring actress worked as a receptionist at a doctor's office—"I was God-awful at it. I was always forgetting to file stuff and I was wretched at answering the phones."

'Helix' is familiar, but frightening anyway

SHOW PATROL

Curt Wagner

» cwwagner@tribune.com
» @showpatrol

As scientists and soldiers in the new Syfy series "Helix" race-crawl through air ducts and dark corridors to hunt down muck-spewing mutants, viewers will be reminded of other iconic science fiction productions.

"Alien," "The Andromeda Strain," "The Thing" and other tales of people trapped in terror-filled isolation inform the 13-episode series, but series creator Cameron Porsandeh and executive producer Ronald D. Moore still manage to surprise and scare with their tale of paranoia at an Arctic research facility.

"Helix" may not be all that original, but it's the best show Syfy has premiered in a long time. It's a welcome return to serious sci-fi for a network that lately has filled its slate mostly with fantasies, fairy tales, monster

!!! Helix

9 p.m. Fridays, Syfy

mashups and far too many reality shows.

The series stars Billy Campbell as Dr. Alan Farragut, who leads a team from the Centers for Disease Control to a remote polar complex run by Arctic Biosystems where scientists are performing grisly experiments with a deadly virus that has infected Alan's brother Peter Farragut (Neil Napier) and two other researchers.

Alan's team includes his ex-wife, Dr. Julia Walker (Kyra Zagorsky), star virologist Dr. Sarah Jordan (Jordan Hayes), snarky veterinary pathologist Dr. Doreen Boyle (Catherine Lemieux) and Army security expert Maj. Sergio Ballesteros (Mark Ghanime), who seems to have shifting allegiances.

The center's director, Dr. Hiroshi Hatake

(Hiroiyuki Sanada), offers the CDC team unlimited access to the base and any research to help them corral the virus. The team begins studying Peter to learn why he is still alive—although with black blood coursing through his body—while the other victims have been reduced to bones and muck.

Hatake keeps his distance, spying on them and hiding vital information as Alan and his team uncover horror after gross-out horror in the maze of labs. (Beware the test monkeys!) Tension builds to a breaking point before a new revelation resets the action and the slow boil starts all over again.

"Helix" isn't without faults. Bad dialogue and its less-than-stellar supporting cast can be distracting. Soap-opera subplots—Julia was involved with both Farraguts and Sarah has a thing for Alan—often derail the action. But the series hits its stride in the third episode when the outbreak spins out of control, forcing Alan to make difficult decisions that challenge his personal sense of morality.

Hints of a deeper mythology are revealed, too, suggesting that "Helix" will move beyond its stop-the-virus story into something even more intriguing. In the meantime, it's a suspenseful, scary thriller.

Joseph Gordon-Levitt is extending his hitRECORD brand to the Pivot network with “HitRecord on TV,” where contributors to the online production company answer his calls for original artwork, songs, animation and other creative endeavors to be used for collaborations to create short films, live performances, music and other productions.

Pivot, which calls itself a cable channel for Millennials, already has great original programming in the comedy “Please Like Me” as well as the docu-talk show “Raising McCain.” If the first episode is any indication, “HitRecord on TV” makes a great addition to the network’s lineup.

Gordon-Levitt acts as MC of the six themed Season 1 episodes. (Pivot already has renewed the show for a second season.) The show’s first episode, which is available online, is appropriately called “RE: The Number One,” and focuses on “the No. 1, Numero Uno, the champion, the guinea pig...” Gordon-Levitt says.

HitRecord on TV

9 p.m. Saturday, Pivot

Among the variety of offerings in the first episode, Gordon-Levitt and some of his contributors perform an original song, “You’re Not the Only One,” created after he asked folks to come up with a song about loneliness.

The final product is the result of 934 contributions and I can’t get the song out of my head. It needs to be a single, JGL!

The episode also features an animated short film created from a true story by

Elle Fanning in ‘HitRecord on TV’ contributor Roswell Gray of Lincoln, Neb., voiceover work from KatSmash in Scotland, acting performances by Elle Fanning and James Patrick Stuart (JGL has friends), and the work of animators, musicians and more.

All told, 1,440 contributions went into “First Stars I See Tonight,” a delicate, bittersweet story about a nearly blind girl and the dad who gives her the stars.

You don’t have to be a Gordon-Levitt fan—but really, who isn’t?—or have visited the hiRECORD website to enjoy the show. Gordon-Levitt’s energy wraps around you like a warm down jacket in subzero Chicago cold.

The collaborative process he champions extends to the viewing experience “HitRecord on TV” provides—wildly entertaining, thought-provoking and unexpectedly moving.

Here’s hoping future episodes are just as inspiring and heartfelt.

Who will play Wrigley?

By Ernest Wilkins | REDEYE

Initial speculation has begun on who will be playing the now-annual concert at Wrigley Field. Live Nation has revealed that we're going to find out Thursday, but we can widely speculate now, right? RIGHT?!!

Since Wrigley concerts usually cost a pretty penny, a legacy act or a country performer with a rabid fan base that can definitely pack a house often are selected. We've put together a poll online for you to guess, but here are my immediate thoughts.

FLEETWOOD MAC

Reasons to go:

- » They can put it down live.
- » THA GAWD Christine McVie has returned to the lineup for this year's tour.

Reason not to go:

» Getting swarmed by cougars who write Stevie Nicks faux-hippie affirmation blogs tore up on the wine you get in those plastic cups with the top

BRUUUUUUUCE

Reasons to go:

- » To see the largest collection of white-collar people who used to be blue collar, white-collar people who pretend they're blue collar, blue-collar people who have tons of cash thanks to seedy connections and post-grads who aspire to be all of these.
- » Bruce Springsteen is the [bleeping] man.

Reason not to go:

- » You still haven't gotten over the Big Man leaving this earthly plane starts crying

FOO FIGHTERS

Reasons to go:

- » They're absolutely awesome live.
- » You legit have a chance to do Fireball shots with Dave Grohl at The Dugout.

Reason not to go:

- » You cry every time during "My Hero" and don't want anyone to see.

FLORIDA GEORGIA LINE

Reasons to go:

- » You frequent Houndstooth.
- » You were the social chair of your sorority and TOTALLY made hayride T-shirts that were just the PBR logo with your letters on it.
- » You drive a truck but haven't seen a hard day's work ... ever.

Reason not to go:

- » You are not white.

ARE THESE BERRY BAD AWARDS ACTUALLY A SIGN OF GREATNESS?

By Dana Moran | REDEYE

Hark! Is that the sound of an extended fart noise on the wind? The 34th annual Razzie Award nominations were announced Wednesday with much Internet fanfare. But the awards, which honor the worst in film each year, have a secretly highbrow history: They sometimes honor real-live Oscar nominees. In fact, Sandra Bullock picked up her worst actress trophy for "All About Steve" just days before winning a best actress Oscar for "The Blind Side" in 2010. With that special year in mind, we drew up a diagram of this year's Razzie nominees to see which ones also have been up for an Oscar. Twitterpated

Julia Roberts literally has no idea how to use Twitter. No, seriously. "I picture Twitter on a pager, which I know is antiquated," she told reporters during a press conference for "August: Osage County." "I don't know where you Twitter!" Here's a hint, girl: You can't use it on those giant phones from "My Best Friend's Wedding."

They're playin' my song!

Ever think those singing competition reality shows are getting a little too similar? There's a reason. Vulture.com ranked the most-repeated performances on shows like "American Idol" and "The Voice," and found that Whitney Houston's "I Have Nothing" has been sung 17 times—most memorably by Chicago's own Jennifer Hudson. Hot on its heels are Nina Simone's "Feeling Good" (15) and "Piece of My Heart" by Janis Joplin (13). Remember that the next time you're out for karaoke.

SHE'S A MODEL, BABY

"Girls" creator Lena Dunham has met the approval of at least one fashion maven: Anna Wintour. Dunham sports a red-and-white polka-dot shirt and some serious eye makeup on the February cover of Vogue magazine, which was revealed Wednesday. Inside the mag, she talks about feeling like an outsider at an in-crowd Hollywood party. "They had a private chef there making pizza, and I remember the dog was wearing a bow tie," she said. "Every time I looked around, it would be like, Is that someone I know from camp? No, that's Ashton Kutcher." Happens to us all the time.

HOT DATE

AUG. 17

That's when Katy Perry's Prismatic tour will hit the United Center, she announced Wednesday. The 46-city tour kicks off June 22 in Raleigh, N.C.

'Groundhog Day'

Encore, encore!

Here's some news that will please the most reluctant theater-goers. "Groundhog Day" is being adapted as a musical by the man who put Roald Dahl's "Matilda" onstage, thr.com reports. And an opera about Milli Vanilli called "Wow" is set to open Jan. 23 in Brooklyn, the New York Times reports. If you forgot who Milli Vanilli is, allow us to put the following in your head: "Girl you know it's, girl you know it's, girl you know it's..."

The other 'Silver Lining'

Jennifer Lawrence has yet another reason to thank her lucky stars. The "Silver Linings Playbook" star, who won an Oscar for her role in that flick, almost wasn't cast. Anne Hathaway and Mark Wahlberg originally were set to play Tiffany and Pat, respectively, in the flick, Harvey Weinstein told Howard Stern on Wednesday. Fortunately for Lawrence, Hathaway dropped out due to creative differences with director David O. Russell. And thus, the history books were changed.

“He smashed the place up, got naked and kept seeing this owl.”

—Rupert Grint, to E! News, on watching "Charlie Countryman" co-star Shia LaBeouf drop acid. It probably was the ghost of Hedwig.
